

Implants for missing teeth

It is not unusual for patients seeking orthodontic treatment to be missing adult teeth. Sometimes they never develop an adult tooth and sometimes a tooth is lost due to decay or bone loss. Fortunately, dentistry has developed predictable and permanent replacements for teeth called dental implants.

We request that you see an implant specialist before you begin orthodontic treatment. They will let you know when the ideal time for implant placement will be.

The implant specialist places the implant in the missing tooth spot.

You will see your general dentist to have a crown made that matches your other teeth.
